Abstract

The invention provides a distributed event notification mechanism that allows distributed applications to communicate with each other by generating events and receiving events through a distributed event notification service. An event manager coordinates activities between respective applications to ensure distribution regardless of the physical location of network elements. A naming service provides details of application location and configuration.

11